Delivering the Birth Experience You Desire

WHEN YOU’RE expecting a baby, you’ll make many important decisions. One of the earliest and most important decisions is choosing where you’ll deliver your bundle of joy. At the Henry Ford West Bloomfield Hospital Birthing Center, obstetricians, midwives, nurses and neonatologists take a family-centered approach to delivering babies in the safest, most comfortable environment possible. “We do everything in our power to help families enjoy the birthing experience that they envision,” says Neil Simmerman, M.D., an obstetrician-gynecologist at Henry Ford West Bloomfield Hospital.

A SPECIAL PLACE TO WELCOME YOUR BABY
The Birthing Center provides comprehensive services that support women throughout pregnancy, labor, delivery and recovery. They include:
- Private and spacious suites
- Hydrotherapy tubs for comfort during labor and recovery
- Two cesarean section rooms located within the Birthing Center
- In-house obstetricians, certified nurse midwives and anesthesiologists on-call 24 hours a day, seven days a week

“Most women stay in one room throughout labor, delivery and recovery,” Dr. Simmerman says. “While the rooms are designed to be comfortable, with more of a home than hospital feel, they’re fully functional delivery rooms and contain everything we need from a medical standpoint.”

For babies requiring a higher level of care, the Newborn Special Care Unit is located within the Birthing Center. There are large private rooms and bedside accommodations, so you can stay near your baby even for extended periods of time.

FAMILY-CENTERED CARE FROM THE START
The Birthing Center’s family-centered approach means that providers listen to what patients desire for their delivery and work together to help make it happen. “This can range from receiving an epidural early in labor, to using the hydrotherapy tub and having a nonmedicated early in labor, or anything in between; we can typically provide the safest way of having the experience you want,” Dr. Simmerman says.

That level of compassionate care continues for women who require C-sections. The Birthing Center staff practices gentle C-sections in which you can have music played in the operating room and have your baby placed on your chest immediately after birth.

“Our family-centered approach isn’t limited to the Birthing Center,” Dr. Simmerman says. “It encompasses the entirety of our care from the day you find out you’re pregnant and continues after you bring your baby home.”

A HAPPY and HEALTHY BEGINNING

WELCOMING A NEW BABY INTO THE world is a special and life-altering experience. Henry Ford West Bloomfield Hospital is committed to making the journey as safe and joyful for families as possible. Since 2014, Henry Ford West Bloomfield has been designated a Baby-Friendly Hospital by the World Health Organization. It’s a designation that few hospitals in the U.S. have achieved.

“First and foremost, the Baby-Friendly designation means that the entire Henry Ford organization supports mothers feeding babies however they choose,” says Susan Dendrinos, R.N., director of clinical operations. “For women who choose to breastfeed, we apply all evidence-based practices to support and protect breastfeeding.”

EVERY STEP OF THE WAY

This support begins at the very first prenatal visit, where moms are encouraged to consider and learn about breastfeeding. Certified lactation consultants lead breastfeeding classes on the benefits and how-to’s of breastfeeding. Once you deliver your baby, providers do everything they can to support nursing, such as placing your baby on your chest right away — for both vaginal and C-section deliveries, when possible. “Immediate skin-to-skin contact helps stabilize the baby’s breathing, temperature and heart rate, and encourages the very first feeding,” Dendrinos says. “We perform many of the baby’s first exams and measurements right there on mom’s chest.”

The Baby-Friendly designation also means that the birthing center encourages rooming-in, so babies stay with their moms the entire time. Pediatrician visits, nurse assessments and newborn screenings take place by your bedside, Dendrinos adds. If your baby needs to stay in the Special Care Nursery, support is available for breastfeeding moms, too. “We provide hospital-grade breast pumps, private rooms and encourage skin-to-skin contact to stimulate breast milk production,” she says.

CARE THAT NEVER QUITS

Support for breastfeeding mothers continues even after they bring their babies home. “Women can make an appointment with a lactation consultant and return at any time,” Dendrinos says. As a Baby-Friendly Hospital, staff throughout the organization is trained to help breastfeeding moms. “We are committed to providing the safest and highest quality of care for moms and babies.”

AT HENRY FORD WEST BLOOMFIELD HOSPITAL, you have choices when it comes to the type of provider you see. Whether you’re a woman who needs a routine well-woman visit, contraceptive counseling, prenatal care or support through menopause, midwives provide a full spectrum of services.

“One of the hallmarks of being a midwife is the relationship we build with women and their families,” says Lorie Pender, a certified nurse midwife at Henry Ford West Bloomfield Hospital. Midwives take the time to discuss all options when it comes to your health or pregnancy and will support you in the decisions you make.

SPECIAL DELIVERIES
During pregnancy, midwives encourage women to develop and discuss their birth plans with them. “If you were to envision your dream labor and birth, what would you want to happen and how can we help you make those things happen?” Pender asks.

A common misconception is that women can only work with a midwife if they have a nonmedicated birth, but midwives support all types of birth plans. “Whether you want to have a birth without any medications, plan to receive an epidural, are having a scheduled C-section or aren’t sure what you want until you’re in labor, we can create the experience patients desire, as long as they and their baby are safe,” Pender says.

Midwives also have a wide range of tools available to comfort women during labor, depending on what each woman wants. This includes massage, aromatherapy with essential oils, using a hydrotherapy tub or shower and much more.

Midwives and obstetricians have a positive and collaborative relationship, says Patricia Scane, a certified nurse midwife at Henry Ford West Bloomfield Hospital. A physician and midwife are on call in the hospital 24/7 and will see patients in the same office, too. “If an issue is beyond our scope of care, we’ll consult a physician and develop a plan,” she adds. Even if a previously low-risk woman develops a high-risk condition, such as gestational diabetes or hypertension, midwives may be able to comanage her care alongside physicians if it’s within the realm of safety.

ALL AGES AND STAGES
Midwives continue caring for women throughout all stages of their lives. “I have patients I’ve taken care of for many years whose daughters also come to see me,” Scane says. While midwives partner with women who are healthy and low-risk, they’re by your side if new symptoms or health problems occur at any time, too. “We can provide an initial evaluation, order tests and refer you to our physician colleagues for any necessary follow-up,” Scane says.

“We collaborate with women throughout their lifetimes and take our time getting to know each patient,” Pender says. “We’re there with you throughout your journey and to partner with you in your care.”

Respectful. Compassionate. Inclusive.
An important part of the Birthing Center’s family-centered approach is respecting families’ cultural beliefs. “This is a very diverse area and we want to collaborate with our patients,” Dr. Simmerman says. Providers encourage patients to discuss their preferences throughout their pregnancies so they can do their best to accommodate patients during labor, delivery and recovery. In addition to the standard hospital menu, vegetarian, halal and kosher options are available, too.

WHERE YOUR HEALTH Comes First

THE DEPARTMENT OF WOMEN’S HEALTH Services at Henry Ford West Bloomfield Hospital offers comprehensive care for women of all ages. In addition to obstetricians, gynecologists and midwives, board-certified and fellowship-trained specialists and subspecialists provide a broad range of services for women.

“One of the advantages of having so many specialties available at our hospital and clinics is that we can easily collaborate and work as a team to expedite each patient’s care,” Dr. Theoharis says. For younger patients, a fellowship-trained adolescent gynecologist is available to provide routine gynecologic care, contraceptive counseling, and diagnosis and treatment for problems such as irregular bleeding.

HELPING TO BUILD FAMILIES
For couples trying to conceive, obstetricians and gynecologists work alongside reproductive endocrinologists and other experts within the Henry Ford Health System to diagnose and treat conditions such as infertility and reproductive endocrine disorders.

During pregnancy, women receive comprehensive care throughout labor, delivery and the postpartum period at the Henry Ford West Bloomfield Hospital Birthing Center. “We have a large group of obstetricians and any of the delivering physicians may be on call when a woman is in labor,” Dr. Theoharis says. “We encourage patients to meet as many of the providers as possible during their prenatal visits in order to become familiar with them.”

When you’re a patient with Women’s Health Services at Henry Ford West Bloomfield Hospital, you have access to convenient, individualized care throughout every stage of your life. To make an appointment with a provider, call 248-661-6425. Visit HenryFord.com/WomensHealth for more information.

FULL SPECTRUM OF WOMEN’S HEALTH SERVICES
Providers with Women’s Health Services deliver high-quality routine care. In addition, some of the specialties and subspecialties available within the department include:
• Obstetrics and midwifery
• Reproductive medicine at the Henry Ford Center for Reproductive Medicine
• Minimally invasive gynecologic and robotic surgery
• Pediatric and adolescent gynecology
• Gynecologic oncology
• Mammography and breast health services at the Francee & Benson Ford Jr. Breast Care & Vita wellness center
• Urogynecology
• Genetic counseling
• Sexual Health Clinic

A team of highly trained physicians offers minimally invasive procedures including treatment for endometriosis and fibroids. These conditions used to be treated with traditional surgery that involved large incisions, Dr. Theoharis says. The minimally invasive approach enables surgeons to make smaller incisions and use special instruments to perform the procedures, resulting in shorter hospital stays, faster recovery and less pain.

Advanced Prenatal Care
For women with high-risk pregnancies, a dedicated maternal-fetal medicine specialist is available with Women’s Health Services. “Our providers work side by side with the maternal-fetal medicine specialist so women receive supportive, continuous and coordinated care throughout their pregnancies,” Dr. Theoharis says.
