All of Us Advisory Council host first meeting

The All of Us Advisory Council welcomed new members at their first meeting held on September 25. The newly formed council participated in a welcome workshop followed by a panel discussion with All of Us team members. The meeting also provided the council an update on the program and asked for suggestions on how to improve the enrollment process. Meetings will take place bi-monthly with the goal of advancing the program. With the help of program participants, the goal is to enroll more than one million people in the program.

Rick Smith, M.D., vice president of physician outreach and partnerships at Henry Ford Health System speaking on the All of Us Research Program at National Launch...

"I am very optimistic. I see no health challenge that we can't meet together. We should be able to identify the modality of treatment of each and every one based on the genetics and the environment and that's what the All of Us Research program is all about. I ask everybody to sign-up and pay it forward."
